

Taloria Edwards is a proud Howard University senior nursing student with double minors in Child and Maternal Health and Sociology. Taloria exuberantly hails from the BNA of Greater Washington DC Area. Her journey into nursing was deeply inspired by her little sister's battle with cancer and the impact of preventable illness within her family. Currently, she serves as a Pediatric Care Tech, combining compassion and skill to support children and families in their care journey.

Taloria is honored to serve as the 2025–2026 National Student Representative for NBNA, where she aspires to unify student scholars, amplify the voices of future nurses, and bring modern perspectives into programming and projects that advance NBNA's mission. With God's leadership and guidance, she looks forward to leaving her mark on the organization this year and beyond.

Outside of nursing, Taloria loves exploring D.C.'s brunch scene, playing tennis, indulging in all things fashion and beauty, and she once shined as a member of the flag team in the Showtime Marching Band. She is also a proud member of Chi Eta Phi Sorority, Inc., Alpha Delta Beta Chapter.

Bright, passionate, and purpose-driven, Taloria is excited to continue uplifting her peers while carrying forward the legacy of excellence within the National Black Nurses Association.
